“I’ve just finished listening to your version of Pictures, and it elicits a large ‘bravo’ from this quarter. The orchestration is masterful throughout, and some sections (e.g. the opening of Ballet of Chicks) I prefer to any other I’ve heard. There are no weak spots in it, and I’m sure this version will be played many times again.” — David DeBoor Canfield, President, International Kartinskij Association.

Peter Breiner arranger and conductor

#135 Mussorgsky: Pictures/Nursery/Songs Naxos, NX 8.573016 2012

Review:

“This Breiner version packs a real punch. It may be less elegant and sophisticated in its approach when compared to Ravel but this is a genuine attempt to produce a powerful, hard-hitting piece of work for the modern day symphony orchestra. There are no gimmicks - it’s just a new way of looking at the score and adding extra sonorities and layers to the sound. In this respect it is closer to Stokowski than to Ravel. There are, however, some movements in this new orchestration that are very similar to Ravel’s classic version and this is a testimony to Breiner’s honesty. He’s not made changes just for the sake of it. Judged as a piece of orchestral wizardry it’s incredibly exciting and it contains some genuine hair-raising moments. The sound-world of Hollywood is often not so very far away.

The work starts very gently with a Promenade featuring alto flute, cor anglais and strings. The music then builds and the texture fills out to include the full orchestra. Gnomus relies on heavy use of percussion. We are treated to swirling clarinets, harp glissandi and whooping horns. This is high voltage stuff, reminiscent of a Hammer horror film. This subsides and is followed by another Promenade, this time led by a solo cello. The Old Castle is very special. In Breiner’s hands it becomes The Haunted Castle and very spooky it is too with its tolling bells and tuned percussion. The opening theme is given to the bassoon with a piccolo adding an unusual antique effect: an octave plus a fifth above. Bydło has to be heard to be believed. This is no ordinary ox-drawn cart, it’s a huge monster of a juggernaut and there is an epic sense of struggle going on here. Heavy timps, horns and woodblocks - the hooves I presume - make this a massive, exhausting ride. The Ballet of the Chickens and Samuel Goldberg don’t stray too far from Ravel’s orchestration in spirit but Schmuyle is depicted by woodwinds and strings rather than the difficult, slightly clumsy part that Ravel gifted to the solo trumpet. All hell breaks loose in The Hut on Fowl’s Legs with its heavily orchestrated multi-layered sound - Stokey would have approved of this, for sure. The percussion department has a field day and the whole thing is tremendously exciting. The same can be said of The Great Gate of Kiev and this brings the piece to an overwhelming, all engulfing close. This doesn’t replace Ravel but it certainly sits happily alongside it and makes for a refreshing, highly spectacular change.  —John Whitmore | http://www.musicweb-international.com/classrev/2014/Feb14/Mussorgsky_pictures_8573016.htm

“With this arrangement you can bring Pictures At An Exhibition to sound in all its shades of colors. To enable the extension on the orchestral writing, the strings (except a few) in the previous version [Ravel?] have been maintained. Newly added are ad lib. 2 C, 2 (or 3) Bb, 2 Eb - and 2 C-bass-wind parts. Guitar, harp, percussion (cymbals, temple blocks, tambourine, glockenspiel, etc.) and timpani ad lib. complete the symphonic spectrum. The editing is interesting for all instruments and this partly creates more demanding tasks.” — The publisher

Review: “Yet another Pictures at an Exhibition, I hear you say! Well, yes, but this is a somewhat different affair for here is (the late) Lawrence Leonard's rarely heard arrangement for piano and orchestra made [published] in 1977. As a whole it is a quite satisfying compromise preserving most of the piano original (the opening Promenade, less spectacular than Ravel's, is for orchestra alone). In most other movements the original material is shared by piano and orchestra in a "concerto-like" manner. It would be idle to list all the differences between Lawrence's arrangement and, say, Ravel's (which is by far the most popular). However, some may be singled out. For example, The Old Castle dispenses with Ravel's saxophone and opts for cello and piano with soft sustaining harmonies including a suggestion of wind (wind machine or soft roll on suspended cymbals, we are not told) or Goldenberg and Schmule, Goldenberg being given a ponderous, pompous orchestral garment and the piano original kept for the wailing Schmule (quite effective indeed). Some movements may sound less impressive than in Ravel's version, e.g. Bydlo, The Catacombs or even The Great Gate of Kiev; but all in all Lawrence's arrangement is well worth having for a change from Ravel's ubiquitous version.” — Hubert Culot

Arr. LEONARDI, Leonidas (b. Moscow, RU, 27 July 1901; d. New York, NY, 1 March 1967)

Name: “Leonid Leonardi when he was in Russia, then Leonidas Leonardi when he was in FR, and later on when he crossed the Atlantic to go to America he became Leon Leonardi.” — Aggelos Tsompanidis

Bilder einer Ausstellung (Leonardi, Leonidas) Per title page of the score: Published 1924 by W. Bessel & Co., Paris

“A new version of "Pictures" was commissioned by the publisher of Mussorgsky's piano original (W. Bessel & Co., Paris) since they were quite taken aback by the enormous success of the Ravel version following its premiere in 1922 under Koussevitzky's direction. They'd assumed that Koussevitzky's commission would not be a success, so they asked an orchestration pupil of Ravel himself, Leonidas Leonardi to provide them with an orchestral version of their own which would out-do Ravel's. Leonardi duly obliged, dedicated his arrangement to Stravinsky, and conducted the premiere himself with the Lamoureux Orchestra in Paris on 15 June 1924. The U.S. premiere took place when the New York Symphony Orchestra played it on 4 December 1924 under the baton of Walter Damrosch.” — Edward Johnson

“I have received the reply from Breitkopf [in 2009] and I’m sorry to tell you that this edition of Pictures is unavailable. Breitkopf has never supplied this music for performance and had not reviewed the materials at all until my inquiry to them, at which time they have unfortunately found the score to be incomplete.” — Ella Marie Winfield, Manager, [ret.] G. Schirmer Rental.

“Leonard Slatkin did use sections of the Leonardi orchestration published by Breitkopf for his "compendium" versions in 1990. The published score was complete in 1997 when received as a perusal by a conductor. See the Luck’s entry below.” — Clinton F. Nieweg

The listing for saxes “1.Sop, 2.Alto, 3.Tenor" stands for "1st Soprano, 2nd Alto, 3rd Tenor." In German: the little period makes the number ordinal: "1.Sop" = "erstes Sopran" (= first soprano), and so on.” — David Daniels Percussion Assignment 4 player version. The original 5 player version is recommended, see above.

Player 1: xyl, glock, tri (except mvt.VII), sus cym (88 to 89 - quick switch to tri after roll), tri/tam-tam (121 to the end);

Player 2: sd, whip, chime; Player 3: crash cyms, sus cym (except 88 to 89), tam-tam (VIII, IX); Player 4: bd (rolls req’d), rat, tri (VII only), tam-tam (X: 110-114)
Option Notes: if playing this option, set up the chimes near P1's tam-tam so the chimes player can help with dampening the tam-tam (if necessary/possible) at the very end.
For the ending, instead of P1 playing tri/tam-tam (121-end), P2 could play chime/tam-tam (121 to the end); or use a fifth player!
Also note: P1 or P4 could play whip; P1 could play ratchet; P1 or P2 could play tam-tam in VIII and IX.
Instrument notes: Printed xyl. range: Db3, 3rd line bass clef, to F5, fifth line treble clef - play one octave higher (or only play the passage with the low Db3 one octave higher).
Printed glock. range: D4, one tone above middle C4, to E6, 3rd ledger line above treble clef.

“Jean-François Monnard presents a text in which even the tiniest detail is authentic. The edition not only eliminates many previously undiscovered errors, but also offers a wealth of practical information on the long and multi-faceted performance history of the work, including the metronome markings of great conductors who were connected to the work in a very special manner.” — The publisher

Pictures at an Exhibition

[This should not be considered as a different arrangement but a conductor’s re-orchestration in some measures.]

On 13, 14, 15 May 1930 Toscanini conducted the NY premiere with the Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York (now the NYP). The Ravel orchestration of the Pictures at an Exhibition was then taken on tour 9, 13 May, and 3 June 1930. His last performances with the Philharmonic of this arrangement were on 13, 14, 15, February 1936. Orchestra members reported that he made some changes.

Recording with durations listed: Toscanini e l'Orchestra del Teatro alla Scala (1948) (CD. © Fono Enterprise 1090)

“An incisive but better-preserved January 26, 1953 recording by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra (BMG 60287) [with his modifications] drew further accolades, although his magnificent 1948 La Scala concert (Radio Years 99 or Originals 852) had been more supple and elating, despite rather crude sound.” — Peter Gutmann

I have followed the Ravel score with at least two different Toscanini recordings, and I can warrant that his changes to his score were very limited in number, and minor in character. — David DeBoor Canfield

“In Tuileries Toscanini has the oboes match the staccato articulation of the flutes, with whom they play in unison, whereas Ravel has them slur their parts against the staccato flute. ... Toscanini’s Baba-Yaga is appropriately thunderous, but he changes Ravel’s articulation once again, this time in the trumpets in measure 33 (and similar passages), where he has them slur the first two notes of their phrase.” — Snips from David DeBoor Canfield’s article which originally appeared in Issue 38:2 (Nov/Dec 2014) of Fanfare Magazine.

Source of orchestration? “It is likely that Sevitzky made it for his own use as conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony, in which capacity he served from 1937 to 1955.” — Jason Klein

Author: Jason Klein, “Mussorgsky's Pictures at an exhibition: a comparative analysis of several orchestrations”

Dissertation: Typescript (photocopy). D.M.A. final project--Department of Music, Stanford University, CA. 1980

“Part I of the five parts of Klein's study discusses The Versions and their Availability, and in this chapter Klein notes that he could NOT secure a copy of the Sevitzky arrangement.” — Review by Michael Saffle, Bulletin of the Council for Research in Music Education No. 71 (Summer, 1982), (pp. 65-68). Pub: University of Illinois Press
Sevitzky arrangement found by Brent Anderson, March 2017. “This is probably the only set of parts. The parts are in ink, done with fountain pen and colored pencil, and there are a few inserts/tape overs in some parts, but after 65 years, some of the tape is falling apart. It would probably need some attention before it goes to the stands, but if anyone is interested, it should be located in a place that is accessible and where people can find it. Score is the composer’s manuscript. Part are professionally copied by Robert Staton Jr., Registered Arranger & Copyist, Local 655 A.F. of M. Number 157. The material has been used, as the parts contain player marks.

It’s similar to the Ravel, the Bydlo melody is in the tuba, but the ending is different. The Old Castle is for English Horn instead of alto sax. I haven’t been through the whole piece, so not really sure how similar or different it is. But, it looks like Fabien Sevitzky worked from a Moussorgsky’s piano solo part printed by Edward B. Marks Corporation, as that edition is with the set and marked up with instrumentation notes.” — Brent Anderson Banderson@pacificsymphony.org

Dur: 35’ to 36’

“A document I put together listing all the movements and arrangers for Slatkin’s 3rd compilation of Pictures at an Exhibition along with where the music was purchased/rented in the U.S. Some of the arrangements are different in this 3rd version from Slatkin’s 1st and 2nd versions.

It is a very expensive proposition to do this 3rd version: so many different rentals, and a very large orchestration. However, I have notes in there about how to easily reduce the orchestration by 8 players without really changing the sound (for example: Stokowski’s movement has 8 horns, but horns 5-8 just double horns 1-4, so you can easily do without them). We did perform/record this with the original very large orchestration.” — D. Wilson Ochoa, [former] Principal Music Librarian, Nashville Symphony; current Principal Librarian, Boston Symphony

Movement 16 arr. Gamley has a huge instrumentation complete with men's chorus and organ.
Douglas Gamley [Arr. Great Gate of Kiev] (b. Melbourne, AU, 24 September 1924; d. 5 February 1998)

“The estate advised that the Gamley arrangement was not published, and they do not charge to rent materials or perform it; in fact, they don’t even loan materials, as they don’t have any. Nashville Symphony obtained parts that were copied out by the BBC orchestra librarian. The only requirement was that the orchestra notify Peter Marsh, beneficiary of performances. magicbrit(at)bigpond.com For material contact the Nashville librarian at www.nashvillesymphony.org — Wilson Ochoa, Principal Librarian, Boston Symphony

Optional SATB chorus part created for the final Chorale and Finale. Originally, only men’s chorus needed (and just in the last movement). Recorded this way.

NOTES about chorus:
This second instrumentation, which covers everything just as well, reduces from 7 to 5 players. The revised, smaller, instrumentation, with comments:

NOTES on how to reduce:
Flutes: Limoges Mvt. could be done with 3 players by having 2nd piccolo double on 2nd flute (with a couple of 2nd flute notes put into Cl.). Eliminate Alto Flute from Catacombe (it doubles other instruments). (Reduces from 4 players to 3 players)
Clarinets: 3rd Cl. doubles on Eb throughout; eliminate EbCl and Alto Cl from Catacombe (these notes are doubled elsewhere). (Reduces from 7 players to 5 players)
Saxes: Play only in Catacombe, but are necessary to that orchestration. Slatkin added parts for them in last phrases of finale. Horns: Horns 5-8 only double the first 4 horns in Baba Yaga, and are not necessary. (Reduces from 8 players to 4 players)
Tuba: Combine Bass Tbn. & Tuba 1 parts into just Bass Tbn in Gnomus. Euphonium may cover some Tuba 1 in Catacombe. The rest of Tuba 1 notes are already covered in Bass Trombone. (Reduces from 2 players to 1 player)
This second instrumentation, which covers everything just as well, saves 8 extra players.

NOTES about chorus:
Originally, only men’s chorus needed (and just in the last movement). Recorded this way. Optional SATB chorus part created for the final Chorale and Finale.

“One of the composers who set about orchestrating Pictures from an Exhibition was also the conductor Václav Smetáček in whose life, composing was somewhat of a Cinderella, and when he did embark upon something, it was always from an external impulse only. Arr. TUSHMALOV, Mikhail (b. Tbilisi [Tiflis], Georgia, Russian Empire, 1861; d. Georgia, Russian Empire, 1896)
Tableaux musicaux [sic]; suite pour orchestre <arr. 2 to 22 June 1874> pub. 1886 or 1887. pub. 1891, rev. 1900)
“Instrumentation by M. Tushmalov with collaboration by N. Rimsky-Korsakov.” R-K was the editor of the edition.
“Tushmalov was a pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Conservatory.” — Gerard McBurney

https://www.emsmusic.com/product_p/emsg21220.htm

“The orchestration by Mikhail Tushmalov is actually a suite (which should be obvious with a duration of 20 minutes) and omits all Promenades except the one preceding Limoges (Promenade V) in the original (which opens the suite), plus omits Gnomus, Taileries, and Bydlo. He also cut out five bars from Limoges for some reason. Though the Bessel (Kalmus reprint) score mentions Rimsky-Korsakov on the cover, it seems unlikely that Rimsky had much of a hand in Tushmalov’s suite orchestration wise.” — Tom Takaro, Principal Librarian, Houston Symphony

The eight movement Suite: Durations:
1. Promenade [V]; 1'58"
2. Il Vecchio Castello; 4'17"
3. Ballet-Scherzino. Ballet de poussins dans leurs coques; 1'19"
4. Samuel Goldenberg und Schmuyle; 2'15"

Tableaux D’une Exposition/Pictures at an Exhibition Suite for Orchestra (four Promenades omitted)

3[1.2.3/pic] 3[1.2.3/EH] 3[1.2.3/bcl] 3[1.2.3/cbn] — 4 4 3 euph 1 — 2tmp + 5 (large clapper, small rattle, gong, small 'Indian' drum [tom tom], tri, bd, sd, 2 camel bells, xyl, 2 td, 3 cym [crash and sus?], small sd, glock, tambn)

(two large mushroom bells offstage) — 2hp — org — str

The pedal tmp and the organ pedal are marked “ad lib.” There is an offstage solo for trumpet and one for euphonium. “Includes camel bells in Bydło and adds enormous organ pedal notes … most memorably, at the ultimate cosmic climax of The Great Gates of Kiev.” — Review by James Leonard - Allmusic.com

“Limoge has a 4 measure cut, the mushroom bells replace the repeat in Baba-Yaga and Great Gate is transposed to C major.” — Jason Klein — “Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition: a comparative analysis of several orchestrations”

“The British conductor Henry J. Wood, who had introduced a version of his own in 1915, withdrew it upon acquainting himself with Ravel's.” — Jason Klein [See below for up-dated information as of 2015.]

Recording: “All Promenades are omitted from the Wood version, apart from the "Promenade I" which opens the work. This version performed by Nicholas Braithwaite and the London Philharmonic was recorded for Lyrita in 1990, the recording having remained ‘in the can’ until it was finally released on CD, 13 November 2007 (℗ Lyrita SRCD.216). Recorded at Watford, 10 & 11 January 1990, Producer: Morten Winding, Engineer: John Pellowe

“Russian composer Modest Moussorgsky's most famous work is now available for medium-easy level string orchestra. The arranger has taken careful attention to the production of the full sonorous sound and playability of all parts. Playing in a bold style is essential, and the success of very stringent, biting harmonies requires accurate performance of chromatic intervals.” — The publisher

“Although orchestrated many times this arrangement includes some new colors and possibilities while retaining the solo trumpet in the opening Promenade." The pictures included are: "The Gnome," "The Old Castle," "Tuileries" where a piccolo trumpet is scored in the playground dispute and "Bydlo." This is a difficult but rewarding arrangement for those that accept the challenge. The pensive "4th Promenade" is followed by the spirited and whimsical "Ballet of the Unhatched Chicks" which features the unique colors of the soprano clarinet, soprano saxophone and upper woodwinds. The dark full sound of all the low instruments is contrasted by the traditional trumpet solo in "Samuel Goldenberg and Schmyle" depicting the rich man and the poor man. The hustle and bustle activity of the "Market Place at Limoges" is depicted using woodwinds and upper brass that can be heard haggling over the merchandise. As the market closes everyone scurries off only to arrive at the dark depths of the "Catacombs." "Cum Mortuis in Lingua Mortua" brings back the melodic line of the original promenade in a pensive and lamenting tone." — The publisher

“A fresh and respectful rendition of this classic work. It makes full use of the character, colors, and textures of the work and offers ample ensemble and solo sonorities. One complete score is available encompassing all sections. This is an impressive and massive work for mature bands! Boyd's setting is not a simple rehashing of the famous Ravel orchestration, as Boyd remains more faithful to the bold musical language of Mussorgsky's original composition. This exciting work fits the bill for better high school and college bands yet is substantial enough to meet the needs of professional organizations as well. The work is available in its entirety with all seven sections included at a value-minded price.” — The publisher

“This may well be one of the finest transcriptions ever done for developing bands. Jim Curnow’s carefully crafted arrangement features the six most loved movements of Moussorgsky’s best known work in settings that capture all the life and color of the original [Ravel] orchestral versions.” — The publisher

Notes: “Some printings have pages of the Mallet Percussion part printed in the Timpani part, and vice versa. String Bass p. 3 was on the Percussion II part. Part page turns are also awkward. A seventh player, if available, could double the orchestra bell part on chimes in Mvt. VI, from Reh. 28 to the end. Part assignments determined by the transcriber.” — Russ Girsberger [“Have these corrections been made in the parts?” — Email to Hal Leonard 2015]

“In 2011 I asked Paul Lavender if he would consider a different approach for a setting of Pictures at an Exhibition. Rather than trying to escape from Ravel, I wondered if it were possible to create a band transcription of Ravel, treating his setting as if it were an original composition. Lavender agreed to the challenge and has created this version of Pictures that received its premiere performance at the 2012 Texas Bandmasters Association in San Antonio, Texas.” — Program note by Colonel Michael Colburn, 'The President’s Own' United States Marine Band

"Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition has long held a place of interest in the collective minds of bandsmen. This fine transcription allows today's mature concert bands to perform the work while staying true to the composer's original intent. Simpson's orchestration is the first one for winds based upon the composer's manuscript instead of the flawed 1886 edition of the piano original. Edited by the eminent American composer of wind music, Alfred Reed." — The publisher

"Not for the faint hearted! This transcription was written from the original piano solo, all major movements plus corresponding promenades. I must admit this was really an academic project at first. I thought, why not write this out for clarinet choir? It is very difficult and challenging, but the music is so fantastic that I think it is worth the effort. Feel free to play just a few movements or create a suite. Oh, did I mention that it is quite difficult and challenging? Good luck!” — the arranger

  “David DeBoor Canfield did the transcription of the work for four saxophone voices (1 player) and piano. The result is a very effective revisiting of the work. It’s evident that Canfield loves the piece and knows and loves the sounds of the saxophone family.” — Paul Kennedy

  “David DeBoor Canfield has used Mussorgsky’s music in this virtuoso showpiece, utilizing all four of the major saxophones (soprano, alto, tenor, and baritone -- 1 player). Written for Kenneth Tse, the premiere of the suite took place at the World Saxophone Congress in Scotland, July 2012.”

“Ralph Sauer's landmark arrangement very successfully captures the spirit of the composition by carefully planning rests and managing the technical split between the Solo and Pianist. [All are] about 30+ minutes in length and playable by advanced performers. The Bass Trombone/Tuba arrangement is down a 4th from the Tenor Trombone version. It is a major new addition to the Tuba/Bass Trombone repertoire.” — The publisher

“Based on the autograph manuscript and earliest editions, editor Nancy Bricard addresses the sources and discrepancies between the various publications of Mussorgsky’s most important contribution to piano literature Pictures at an Exhibition. This well-researched edition describes the close relationship between the composer and Russian artist Victor Hartmann, whose paintings and sketches inspired the creation of this collection of musical works. Bricard offers fascinating insight into the composer's compositional process by including music passages in her footnotes that Moussorgsky had discarded from the autograph. Also discussed are matters of tempo, fingering, pedaling and interpretation, as well as background on the historical, cultural and social environment that influenced the composer's music.” — The publisher

Piano solo (178 pp.). 19.2 x 12.5 cm
Pub: Bärenreiter Verlag. ©2013. BA09621 €14.95

“Scholarly-critical Urtext edition based on all the sources. Detailed foreword (Ger./Eng) and suggestions on performance practice. Clear musical layout. Christoph Flamm, an internationally renowned specialist of Russian music of the 19th and early 20th centuries, has edited this Urtext edition for Bärenreiter. He has evaluated the sources and in the process has discovered surprising variant readings of the well-known musical text. The edition will meet the demands of advanced piano students, teachers and pianists.” — The publisher

An impressive example for the particular value of an urtext edition is to be found in bar 17, top staff, second quarter note of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, a work available in many editions.

“The editions by Rimsky-Korsakov (1886) and Paul Lamm (1932), and all following editions give this chord as shown in example 1. [see link above for examples] The autograph unambiguously shows two ledger lines and a total of three clearly recognizable note heads; the position of the lowest, somewhat enlarged (compressed up?) note head can only be interpreted as g[3], presumably even an indistinct concurrence of g[3] and a[3]: The bottom staff displays an erasure at this point: the f[3] was presumably deleted here because it was too close to the chord in the right hand, whereas the hands are never than a fifth apart in this passage; this, too, supports the reading of the lower note of the right hand as g[3] rather than c[4 ‘middle c’].” — The publisher

“Jean Guillou writes in the preface to this edition, ‘A transcription justifies itself only by forgetting that it is a transcription and by incorporating the 'new' instrument into the work, as it were.’ Especially transcribing a work for organ which was originally written for piano possesses a certain risk. Such a transcription should not sound like a piano score played on the organ. Rather, the specific possibilities offered by the organ have to be considered. That is why typically pianistic passages have to be rewritten to get an 'organistic' character. Jean Guillou has masterfully succeeded in turning this great piano and orchestral work into a work for organ.” — The publisher

“This new transcription for organ revolves around the following issues: to respect the original thought of the writing (in its global coherence with its interactions between the pieces which form in the end one and the same work), and the adaptation of a piano writing already very "orchestral" organ writing with its wide acoustic vocabulary, playing technique (specific layout of the masses, sound spatialization, stamps, characters of parts, keyboard changes, specific writing of the bottom pedal part ...) and sound means (ideally a three-rank instrument with a minimum of 56 notes)” — the arranger

Artist: HARTMANN, Victor [Viktor Aleksandrovich Gartman] (b. St. Petersburg, RU, 5 May (O.S. April 23) 1834; Kireevo, Moscow Province, RU, d. 4 August (O.S. 23 July) 1873)
Site showing the few Hartmann 'pictures' that are still extant. “There are no more pictures to be found on the web. I'm searching for years now and I'm pretty sure of it.” — Hans van Riezen http://grotesmurf.madscience.nl/music/mussorg.htm

Artist: HARTMANN, Victor. “On a Google Image search for 'victor hartmann', you'll find jpg images of all of the works that Mussorgsky used that still survive, along with some other Hartmann images. Here are the Mussorgsky images within a descriptive Web page: www.stmoroky.com/reviews/gallery/pictures/hartmann.htm” — Tim Eagan, January, 2000

Artist: HARTMANN, Victor. Nine of the Hartmann paintings and sketches are featured on this site: [These may not be the ones Mussorgsky used.] Go to the website http://www.russisches-musikarchiv.de
In the left frame click "Bilder" under the blue heading "Einblick ins Archiv" and then the collage of three pictures at the top of the page to access the Limoges, Cathedral, and Nuter (the Gnomus). The third one doesn't appear to be Bydlo.
In the left frame again, click "Auszug: Mussorgsky’s Bilder einer Ausstellung." In the left column of the resulting page, you'll find the Chicken Costume (for the Ballet), Catacombs (which also represents the "With the dead in a dead language"). Samuel Goldenberg, Schmuýle, Hut of Baba Yaga, and Great Gate of Kiev. The Les Tuileries and Bydlo are not there.
“It is likely that the pictures provided on the Hartmann galley at this website are not the ones Mussorgsky used in his 'Pictures.' The sketches are supposedly of a Limoges market woman, The Cathedral, a Jewish market woman (different from the first sketch), and the Gnomus. The Gnomus in particular was said to be lost long ago, which leads one to think the strange rooster device is not the correct painting. Also, note how these sketches are not under the Pictures at an Exhibition page, leading one to think that these Hartmann sketches were some not used in Mussorgsky's piece. Thus, although the pictures may not be the ones in which Mussorgsky found inspiration; they can give us a general idea of what he drew upon.” — Marc Mühlbach

Multimedia Event:
Mussorgsky’s Pictures at an Exhibition – Ravel orchestration
Summary: The USC Thornton Symphony and conductor Carl St. Clair present Mussorgsky’s Pictures at an Exhibition in a multimedia event at the Granada Theatre in Santa Barbara.
Description: The performance features animation directed by USC School of Cinematic Arts faculty Michael Patterson and Candace Reckinger in collaboration with animation artists from USC - and Muséik, a new technology developed by Ion Concert Media that allows a human operator to “play” the animated visualizations in sync with a live performance. Ion company founder Scott Winters will be seated within the orchestra, taking cues from the conductor like the other musicians.
The work was created by USC School of Cinematic Arts’ John C. Hench Division of Animation and Digital Arts faculty members Michael Patterson and Candace Reckinger, along with 11 of their animation students and graduates. They premiered the projections in 2011 with the New World Symphony in Miami Beach, FL, as part of the celebration for that symphony’s new building. There, the projections were shown on five screens that surrounded the audience inside the concert hall.
This summer [2015], Patterson and Reckinger, who are the creative directors of the Pictures at an Exhibition visuals, spent several weeks reconfiguring the work for a single panoramic projection. The two, who trained as mixed-media directors, said combining music and visuals can result in a rich immersive experience for the audience.

Copyright information for the Ravel orchestration

Basic U.S. copyright law:
Arrangements, PDFs and scans of printed copies or any other kind of reproduction, including copying by hand from a score to create a part, is not legal for music protected by copyright – i.e. music PUBLISHED after 1 January 1923 in the United States, that was never for sale. If a part is/was for sale only that original part that was bought from the publisher is legal. The date a work was composed is not considered in U.S. copyright law, but rather the date the work was published. U.S. copyright law is not the same as E.U. and Canada copyright laws.

A practical example:
The Mussorgsky/Ravel Pictures orchestration was completed in 1922 and published by Editions Russes de Musique in 1929. Therefore, the parts are under copyright protection in the U.S. until 1 January 2025, by the law which states a work becomes Public Domain (PD) 95 years after publication date. [If the U.S. copyright law does not change before 2025] A composer’s death date is not a consideration in the U.S. law. Only parts that are on rental from Boosey & Hawkes can be used for performance.

For the EU the copyright law is based on a composer’s life + 70 years. Ravel died in 1937 therefore publishers in most of the EU may publish, rent or sell the orchestra parts, but those parts may not be imported or used in the U.S. There is a longer term of copyright for this work in FR, IT and ES.

For Canada, China, Australia, Japan, South Korea and many other countries the copyright law is based on a composer’s life + 50 years. Ravel died in 1937 therefore publishers in those countries may publish, rent or sell the orchestra parts, but those parts may not be imported or used in the U.S. If an orchestra does so a rental fee is due to Boosey & Hawkes.
