Villa-Lobos: 12 Symphonies Publication and Recording Details

Heitor Villa-Lobos (b. Rio de Janeiro, 5 March 1887; d. at home, Rua Araújo Porto Alegre 56, apartment 54, Rio de Janeiro, 17 November 1959) wrote twelve symphonies, though only eleven of the scores survive. He wrote them from early in his career (1916) to very late (1957, two years before his death). http://imslp.org/wiki/Sortable_list_of_works_by_Heitor_Villa-Lobos

All of the Symphonies are under copyright in the U.S. Although Symphonies 1-4 were written before 1923, the scores were PUBLISHED after 1923. PDFs of the scores or parts are illegal. When material is rented to an organization, the score and parts may not be transferred to another organization.

“W” numbers for works are cited from: David P. Appleby, Heitor Villa-Lobos: A Bio-Bibliography (Westport, CT, 1988).

Instruments shown in Bold are not on all instrumentation lists.

“The twelve symphonies of Heitor Villa-Lobos (eleven extant) are perhaps the least known and performed of his published works. Symphonies one through five, written from 1916-1920, represent the composer's early style. After a lapse of twenty-four years, the remaining seven symphonies follow, from 1944-1957, all of which are in the composer's late style. For the most part, the symphonies reveal a strong presence of Portuguese, Indian, and Afro-Brazilian folk song qualities. These folk elements are often expressed in long, on-going melodies having repetitive intervals (Indian), as well as ambiguous tonal characteristics (Portuguese). Typical rhythms include ties and syncopations, hemiolas, and cross-rhythms, reminiscent of Afro-Brazilian folk songs. A wide spectrum of harmonic colors exists in the basically tonal symphonies, recalling certain French Impressionistic influences of parallel harmonies and melodic doublings. Compositional textures include the frequent use of pedal tones, pedal chords, and layers of ostinati. While the symphonies are stylistically similar, there appears to be a change in compositional philosophy. The early symphonies are programmatic, containing melodic unity through a cyclic treatment of themes. Along with traditional large formal designs, the harmonic system tends to be tonally functional. The late symphonies reveal a more inventive compositional approach. Melodies show a greater economy of means with self-generating motives and transformations. Harmonies of polychords, pandiatonic constructions, and quartal sonorities permeate the textures. Folk derived motives and rhythms unify all the symphonies as a natural outgrowth of the Brazilian spirit.” — John William Enyart, dissertation abstract

Post from 2015:

“In conjunction with the Academia Brasileira de Música (ABM), Durand-Salabert-Eschig is bringing up to date its editions of several works by the Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos. As part of a wide-reaching editorial programme, a number of works that have long languished in poor-quality editions are being thoroughly revised and re-engraved. The new editions are mainly of orchestral works.

The new editions are being prepared under the aegis of musicologist Roberto Duarte of the ABM and David Bray, Head of the Editorial Department at Éditions Durand, with contributions from other eminent Brazilian musicians and the collaboration of OSESP (Orquestra Sinfônica do Estado de São Paulo – the São Paulo State Symphony Orchestra). They provide for the first time a properly researched and corrected edition, to be published by Éditions Durand/Eschig. The first pieces to appear, in the autumn/winter of 2015, will include: Symphony n° 10 – Ameríndia”

Brent Anderson <Banderson@pacificsymphony.org> 26 June 2017 and 1 July 2017, email to Mr. Nieweg: [From the assistant librarian at the Pacific Symphony whose conductor, St. Clair, recorded the 11 symphonies with the South West German Radio Orchestra.] "I do recall seeing a box of HVL scores that has been gathering dust for more than 15 years. Dug through boxes and found the green Villa-Lobos box. I believe all 11 symphony scores are there, 2 copies of Symphony #7. No parts for any work."

In the instrumentations - in Bb - is written with the flat sign \flat from the Segoe UI Symbol font. This font may not show on some computers or print outs.

Percussion instruments used in the symphonies of Villa-Lobos:

Per Russ Girsberger, email to Mr. Nieweg, 25 June 2017

Bloco de Madeira = wood block

Bombo = Bass Drum

Caixa = [Aluminum] Snare Drum a.k.a Side Drum

Chocalho = metal tube shaker. An aluminium or wooden frame with a number of rows, each carrying pairs of jingles (platinelas). The chocalho is played by shaking it back and forth and pumping the arms up and down.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PIc21IygY08>

Coco = An instrument constructed by cutting a coconut shell in two halves. The insides are held in the palms of the hands and the outsides of the shells are struck together. Per John H. Beck Encyclopedia of Percussion.

Ganzá = Brazilian rattle cylindrically shaped, and can be either a hand-woven basket or a metal canister which is filled with beads, metal balls, pebbles, or other similar items.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Hxm58zPXzZw>

Guizo = jingles/sleigh-bells attached to a wooden handle

Matracas = ratchet

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W0cMh-f2LY8>

Pandeiro: a type of hand frame drum popular in Brazil. The drumhead is key tunable, and the rim holds metal jingles (platinelas), which are cupped creating a crisper, drier and less sustained tone on the pandeiro than on the tambourine. As it is held in one hand, and struck on the head by the other hand to produce the sound, it is played as a drum.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=F8M3zc-Sfy0>

Pio: An imitation birdcall produced by rubbing two pieces of wood together. Villa-Lobos preferred a conductor's baton and a cigar box. Per John H. Beck.

Pratos = crash cymbals

Reco-reco = rasp:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KzoOLePJrbE>

or Reco-recos can have 3 or 4 springs for a louder sound.

The player rhythmically strikes the metallic springs with a metal stick and can produce various tones by muffling the springs down with either the thumb or some tape.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-JMICATVFX0> Shows Pandeiro and a metal Reco-Reco.

Rugido de leão = Lion's Roar - string drum

Sinos = Tubular Bells/Chimes
